

Vegan Tattoo Ink

Unknown to many, there are animal by products in typical tattoo ink. Some of these byproducts include bone char, glycerin from animal fat, gelatin from hooves, or shellac from beetles. These byproducts are normally found in what is called the carrier solution of the ink and not the actual pigment itself. Are you a vegan and want to get a tattoo but aren't sure about the ink? Vegan tattoo ink could be the solution to your wearable artistic desires.

What is Vegan Tattoo Ink?

So, what is vegan ink? Vegan tattoo ink is a color pigment that is made from products that do not contain any animal byproducts for its color pigment or carrier solution. A carrier solution is the solution that holds the pigment of the ink together and gives the ink a smooth glossy consistency.

Benefits of Vegan Tattoo Ink

There are a variety of benefits associated with vegan ink that could be impartial to a non-vegan as well. The benefits of vegan tattoo ink include:

- Vegan tattoo ink is made from all-natural products
- No harsh chemicals
- Faster healing time
- Less likely to cause a skin reaction
- Vegan ink is typically organic

How to Choose the Best Vegan Tattoo Ink

The best tattoo inks enable artists to tattoo with good consistency without blotting or creating blotches in the design. Although a lot of the reasons why tattoos fade or fail early is about the competency of the artists, much can be said for the ink. It is hard for artists to know which ink to use without testing the inks beforehand.

Thankfully, reviews have been conducted on a variety of vegan tattoo inks to determine which inks are the best to use. These reviews have been written by artists of different skill levels and are completely objective. There are three brands of vegan tattoo ink that come out on top on Amazon based on reviews; Kuro Sumi, Skin Candy and Crazy Horse.
